 - wondering what to expect when they need to apply for a license under the EAR?

Applying for a License Under the EAR Compared to the ITAR?

(Similarities)

- Certain transactions require submission of a license application where you request approval from Commerce or State for a specific transaction.
- Certain information must be provided in the application and the information must be true, accurate and complete (TAC).
- There is an established process, under the EAR and ITAR respectively, for:
 - what information must be submitted,
 - method used to submit information, and
 - process used by USG to review applications.

Applying for a License Under the EAR Compared to the ITAR?

(Differences)

- Commerce licenses are only for items that are “subject to the EAR.”
- In Initial Implementation of ECR April 16 final rule, under certain conditions State licenses may authorize EAR items, provided they are in or with defense articles.
Note: Discussed in more detail later in this presentation.
- No purchase orders are required to apply for Commerce licenses.
- For Commerce licenses, you will need to follow the EAR license application provisions in:
 - Part 748 Applications (Classification, Advisory, and License) and Documentation, and
 - Part 750 (Application Processing, Issuance and/or Denial)

EAR Application System (SNAP-R) and ITAR License Application System (DTrade) (Similarities)

- Commerce and State both use online application systems that are used by the public for submitting license applications and other types of applications under the EAR and ITAR.
- There is a process that must be followed by the public for creating and managing accounts in these application systems to allow submission of applications under EAR (SNAP-R) and ITAR (DTrade).

EAR Application System (SNAP-R) and ITAR License Application System (DTrade) (Differences)

- Commerce uses an online application system called SNAP-R. With SNAP-R, no additional software is required.
- It is FREE to create a SNAP-R account.
- It is FREE to submit license applications to BIS in SNAP-R.
- Do NOT need to register with BIS simply because you are involved with items that are subject to the EAR.
- However, in order to file a license application, you will need to create a SNAP-R account.

Key Things to Understand When Applying for EAR Licenses and Other Types of Applications

SNAP-R	Helpful tip: You will need a SNAP-R account. Create an account as soon as possible, so you are prepared when you need to submit an application.
Facts in hand	Helpful tip: You do NOT need a purchase order in order to apply for an EAR license, but you do need to know the particulars of transaction (items, end users, end uses, etc.). When applying for a license, you should anticipate how much you will need over the period of the license, including requesting any additional buffer for additional quantity that may be needed. <ol style="list-style-type: none">(1) If you need to explain anything on your application, block 24 or a separate attachment can be used. If you have a complex transaction, you can contact the Outreach and Educational Services Division (OESD) and they can put you in contact with the right licensing official to discuss the application prior to submitting it.(2) Anticipate questions USG may have and try to answer those questions in the application itself as needed.(3) License review policies in parts 742, 744 and 746 will give you a good idea of whether application will be approved. NO need to submit an advisory opinion in advance to determine likelihood an application will be approved, as EAR is transparent and efficient for license review policies.

Key Things to Understand When Applying for EAR Licenses and Other Types of Applications

Determine support documentation requirements

Helpful tip: Certain applications will need support documentation.

- (1) See part 748 of the EAR for support documentation requirements.
- (2) Certain support documents need to be submitted with the application, while others you simply indicate in SNAP-R that you have obtained and that you will keep on file.

Stay involved in the process

Helpful tip: Part 750 explains the license review process.

However, before the application is submitted, you already play an important role by putting together an application that is true, accurate and complete (including explaining any information that you need to on the application).

- (1) You can check on the status in SNAP-R.
- (2) If you receive a follow-up question from BIS through SNAP-R, you should respond in a timely manner.

Note: Communication, questions and requests pertaining to your application will all be made via SNAP-R.

Using an EAR License Compared to an ITAR License or Other Approval

(Similarities)

- Under a Commerce and State license you need to stay within the authorized scope of the license or other approval.
- Commerce and State licenses typically contain conditions or provisos that further define the scope of authorized activity.
- If you do not stay within the authorized scope of the license or other approval, you will have violated the respective regulations.

Using an EAR License Compared to an ITAR License or Other Approval

(Differences)

- Commerce licenses typically begin with a “D” number, although in certain cases other letters are also used.
- Commerce licenses tend to have more conditions than a typical State license.
- If you need to make a change to a Commerce license, you will review § 750.7(c) of the EAR.
- You do NOT need to return your license to BIS once it is no longer valid.
- If there is a violation of a Commerce license, you should review § 764.5 (Voluntary self-disclosure).

Distinction for Temporary Imports Under the EAR and ITAR

- Under ITAR, when a defense article is coming into the U.S. and will be sent back out, a temporary import license (or exemption) is required prior to the temporary import.
- Under the EAR, no license or license exception or NLR designation is needed until prior to the export back out of the U.S.

Getting Ready for Transition:

Create Your SNAP-R Account

- Creating a SNAP-R account is an important step that you should take as you prepare for the effective date of the Initial Implementation of Export Control Reform final rule.
- BIS encourages you to create a SNAP-R account as soon as possible and then start familiarizing yourself with the application system.
- Creating a SNAP-R account is automated. But if questions arise, such as when you are preparing your first application in SNAP-R, you may contact BIS for assistance.
- Our goal is to get as many companies as possible to create their SNAP-R accounts prior to the October 15, 2013 effective date of the Initial Implementation of Export Control Reform final rule.

How to get started in SNAP-R?

- SNAP-R Online Registration at <https://snapr.bis.doc.gov/registration>
